

COUNTER-ATTACK BY FRENCH BOTTLES UP GERMAN DRIVE

Nazis Cross Meuse River In Two or Three Places, It is Said

Indication Points To Revival On Grand Scale of Encirclement of Paris

(By International News Service)

PARIS, May 15.—In their latest surge of the war, the Germans have crossed the Meuse River at Sedan, but a fierce French counter-attack has bottled up the drive in a pocket, the French military spokesman announced today.

The push across the Meuse was one of many which the Germans had attempted, the spokesman said. North of Dinant, they also crossed the river in two or three places, he added.

The "greatest battle of history" has now mushroomed along the entire length of the two main fronts, he said.

The first front is in the region of Namur, extending to the junctions of the Meuse and Chiers rivers, and the second battle rages from the Chiers through Sedan, toward Luxembourg.

The crossing at Dinant was not considered serious, he said. There the enemy lines of advance were splintered by fierce defense and splendid counter-attacks held most of the advancing horde across the river.

The main German onslaught, the spokesman said, was launched after the enemy rushed up heavy mechanized forces through Neuschâtel and Bouillon, taking Sedan, which had been evacuated.

BERLIN, May 15.—With the northwestern section of the Maginot Line already pierced by German troops, every indication points today to the fact that Reichsführer has revived on a grand scale the famous old Vonschlieffen Plan for the encirclement of Paris. Already assured of complete success in Holland and now in possession of bases only 30 minutes away from aerial objectives in England, the

DOYLESTOWN GUILD HEARS VARIOUS REPORTS

Members Hear Talk On The Need For The Work

NAME NEW SECRETARY

DOYLESTOWN, May 15.—The Spring meeting of the Needlework Guild's directors was held Saturday at the home of Mrs. William R. Mercer, "Aldie." There were 45 directors in attendance. Mrs. Julian W. Gardy presided.

Reports of committees were given by the following: treasurer's report, by Mrs. C. L. Taylor; auditors' report, by Mrs. Reba A. H. Berger and Mrs. Mabel Liebig; shoe fund report, by Mrs. Mabel Liebig, in which she stated ten pair of shoes had been given out. Mrs. Edmund Dunn read a report from Mrs. Lucinda Harold in which she reported that $73 had been cleared from a movie benefit, "Sidewalks of London."

Mrs. William R. Mercer gave a very interesting report of her recent visit as a delegate to the national convention at New Orleans, La.

Mrs. Gardy introduced the speaker, Mrs. Frederick Palmer, ex-president of Haverford Branch of the Needlework Guild, who spoke of her work with the guild in that section. She also stressed the need for spreading more interest and getting new directors in the guild, and setting the service clubs interested in the work, such as having them dress a child or contributing to the shoe fund. Enthusiasm, loyalty and co-operation are most important in the work, said Mrs. Palmer, in giving to the guild gladly and not grudgingly and trying to think of the pleasure it gives you for the work you are doing. She also stated that 2,000 garments were distributed last year. Mrs. Palmer concluded her talk with the reading of a poem entitled "The Heart Weaver."

It was announced the Fall meeting will be held Thursday, September 26th. Mrs. Gardy also announced that "Mother" Moore will speak to the American Legion Auxiliary meeting on May 14th, and that the S. COMMUNICATION

Dear Stroller:
You have been running pieces in your paper concerning dumps around the town. There is no doubt that some of them are eye-sores. You speak of one on Otter street. Being a property holder on Otter street, I for one would certainly like to see this one filled in. It is nothing but a mosquito hole, as it is now. And certainly anyone coming into town would never be pleased to see anything like it has been. Why not make an improvement in this section of the town? Let the borough ash collector fill this in and then let the owner, who I am sure would be willing to, cover the top with good soil.

Says Bergdoll Knows Secret Weapon

Philadelphia, May 15.—Mrs. Bertha Bergdoll, wife of Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, now serving a prison sentence for World War draft dodging, has written to President Roosevelt that her husband knows "something important" about Germany's reputed new secret war weapon, it was learned today.

Ends Life Near Trevoze

Trevoze, May 15.—A prominent Trenton lumber dealer, Fred Leuckel, ended his life here this morning by inhaling fumes from the exhaust of his automobile, his body being found slumped in the car along the old Lincoln Highway and Street Road.

Leuckel, aged 43, it is stated, had lost heavily in the stock market during the past day or two. His wife was notified at her home on Hillvista avenue, Trenton, of the tragedy.

The discovery of the body was made by Percy Dallas, foreman for a crew of workmen of Philadelphia Electric Company, when the group arrived at site this morning to carry out some duties. Seeing the body slumped in the car, examination showed that a device had been arranged to take the exhaust fumes into the car. It is not known how long previously death had occurred.

Corporal Evans of Oxford Valley barracks; Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo; and Dr. James P. Lawler, deputy coroner of Bucks county, were summoned. Members of Bucks County Rescue Squad endeavored to resuscitate Leuckel, but to no avail. The body was removed to the Horner morgue in Langhorne.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

A borrowed electric heating pad was used to keep alive a one-pound daughter born Wednesday afternoon to a 21-year-old Coopersburg R. D. 1 mother, but the tiny infant died at 5 o'clock Thursday morning.

Mrs. Ernest Gross, wife of a 23-year-old Quakertown cigar box factory worker, is the mother of the tiny child which was born in her residence along the Center Valley Coopersburg road, Wednesday afternoon at 4.30 o'clock.

Dr. W. J. Lowright, Sr., Center Valley physician, said the baby was the smallest he has known to live in his forty-two years of medical practice. He has delivered more than 2,000 boys and girls.

"Get me an electric heating pad quickly," the physician ordered as soon as the baby was born. A pad was located at the home of a neighbor and Dr. Lowright placed the baby on it.

The pad, he explained, gave the child needed body warmth and would aid in increasing her circulation of blood. At birth the baby's pulse was sixty as compared with the normal of 120 to 130 which most babies show at birth.

"The girl was so small you could hold it in your hand," Dr. Lowright said, and, it was too delicate to risk a trip to the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Gross are the parents of one other child, a boy, born in August, 1938. The boy was of normal weight at birth and is in good health.

Parties And The Poll Tax

Washington, May 14.

THERE is excellent reason to believe that eight States of the so-called Solid South will be let down pretty badly by the Democratic party, to which they have so long and loyally adhered, when it meets in national convention the last of July. But it will not do them the least bit of good to get sore. There just isn't a thing they can do about it.

THE only alternative they have is to go over to the Republicans, and there is even less tolerance in that party for their especially cherished political device for disfranchising the colored voter than there is in their own. The States affected are Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas, Tennessee and Virginia; the device is the well-known poll tax, now under so devastating fire from so many important quarters that it seems doomed indeed. There is slight doubt that the Republican convention which meets in June will vigorously denounce the poll tax as an iniquitous discrimination which violates the spirit of the Constitution and pledge itself to find some means of exterminating it.

PRIMARILY, the Republicans will do this because of the Negro vote, so large a part of which in the Northern debatable States was stolen away by the New Dealers and which, since 1936, they have been making the most strenuous efforts to recapture. In eleven or twelve of these debatable States, for three generations, the Negro vote had been the basic Republican asset. In 1936, ninety-six per cent. of it went for Mr. Roosevelt.

Conservationists Enjoy A Walk Along Park Trails

Members of the Garden and Conservation Sections of Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs spent a delightful time yesterday at Washington Crossing Park, the occasion being the fourth annual conservation meeting, which took place at the Thompson-Neeley house, Mrs. Frederick Craven, Richboro, chairman of the group, presided, and following the meeting and box luncheon, a walk through numerous trails of Bowman's Hill was an enjoyable feature.

Mrs. Charles Harper Smith, of the State Park Commission, explained the need of a pavilion at Bowman's Hill, for use for such meetings, and also for shelter in case of rain.

A 100 per cent membership in the Bucks County Dogwood Association was reported on the part of Bristol public schools, the announcement being made by Mrs. Harry Shoemaker, Doylestown. She stated that each child had received a membership card, and a dog-wood tree. Six such trees have already been planted by the association on the dog-wood trail opposite Taylor's Island, Washington Crossing, one to represent each public school of Bristol.

After luncheon the group walked over the marigold, azalea, and Mary K. Parry trails, and found approximately 50 different kinds of Spring flowers in bloom. Pink orchids were located on the Parry trail, and a field of morning glories provided a beautiful sight. White trollius and other interesting and unusual blossoms were discovered. The women viewed the replanting and re-setting work that is being done. The plants are numbered, and on a list which can be secured at the Thompson house, the common and botanical names for the flowers are shown opposite these numbers.

Dr. R. Gill, new superintendent of the park, told the members of improvements being made and planned for the future. "We plan to make Washington Crossing one of the best state parks in Pennsylvania," he told of proposals to improve the camping and picnic grounds. "We must not lose sight of the fact that this is a very historic park, and we must not desecrate it."

WAR TO THE END

So vital and far-reaching is the issue involved in the war in Holland and Belgium between Germany and the Allies that the results of day-to-day fighting will need no interpretation. Neither side will give way unless it is forced to retreat.

Daily intensification of the fighting emphasizes, if emphasis were needed, that the new theatre of war is one in which neither the Allies nor the Germans can afford to risk defeat. For the first time since the 1914 German drive through Belgium, England's safety is directly threatened, as are her communications with her French ally. The growth of air power since that former war renders the threat more dreadful.

The issue at stake is such that from now on neither side can shrink from expending hour by hour the utmost of its strength. And with Churchill fortunately succeeding Chamberlain that program can be expected in Great Britain.

The nightmare of total war, sickening enough in imagination, suddenly has become stark reality. Men are dying by the thousands as this is read and more are marching rank on rank toward death or horrible mutilation.

Historians of the future may find the Allies actually welcomed this chance to carry the war to Germany, or that they would have welcomed it next year or thereafter. The long stalemate was bound to be broken, somewhere, sometime, and the despoilation of Belgium and Holland merely shows that Germany chose the time and place in typical Germanic manner.

The Allies were prepared in some degree of course. So were the Dutch and Belgians and unquestionably it is true their preparations were directed in the main toward Germany. But that only proves the direction taken by their fears, which events now justify so terribly.

But a coldly analytical viewpoint is impossible now in the face of the facts as they are being unfolded. Germany once more has fallen brutally on peaceful peoples, who asked only to be let alone, and whose only crime is that they were neighbors of the Germans.

DISTRESSED HERRING

Federal Surplus Commodities has dealt with a lot of surplus crops, from peanuts to pineapples, but one of the knottiest problems ever encountered is to determine the nationality of a distressed herring.

This fine point came up when the state of Maine applied to FSCC to take over surplus herring from the big 1940 catch. Herring may be smoked or kippered, but in either case they are in distress when there are too many for the market. In such times, FSCC would normally step in and relieve the distress by buying the surplus and supporting the price. But this year the question arose as to whether the herring were really American citizens.

During some seasons the herring run along the U. S. shores, but in other seasons they run along the Canadian shores. Officials found that this year the fish preferred Canada, which made them foreigners. So FSCC told Maine it was unable to relieve the herring distress.

Truth crushed to earth may rise again, but after the war spokesmen get through with it, it isn't likely that it will be able to leave the spot under its own steam.

The Great Game of Politics

In 1938 about fifty-three per cent. swung back to the G. O. P. Republican success in the 1940 election hinges upon ability to hold that fifty-three per cent., or increase it. Recent agitation about the poll tax presents an opportunity. It can be accepted as sure that they will not overlook the chance to convince the Negro that the Republicans are his real friends.

ON the other hand, it seems equally certain that the Republican denunciation of the poll tax at least will be matched by the Democrats. It is the obvious and almost inevitable politics to play. In the first place, President Roosevelt is already on record as against the poll tax. In the second place, the importance of the Negro vote in New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri, Illinois and Michigan is recognized by every Democratic leader outside of the South. Whether Mr. Roosevelt runs again or not, the Democratic politicians in these States will compete with the Republicans for this vote. The Southern protest, in or out of the convention, will not deter them from steps to block any Republican bid.

THE time has gone by when the Solid South can dominate or dictate to Democratic conventions on racial questions—or, for that matter, any other. It was a foolish thing the South did when it acquiesced in abolition of the two-thirds rule. Now it is saddled with an Administration which, through relief funds, Federal patronage and personal cultivation, deliberately has gone after the very vote in the North which Democrats in the South have barred from the polls. Yet so linked is the South to the party that it has no effective way to protest. It has to go along because there isn't any place else to go.

THE case against the poll tax is a strong one. Recently it has been well presented by Mr. Ullie Bell in the Louisville Courier Journal and by others. The most devastating point is that, while this provision does keep the Negroes from voting, it also keeps the whites from voting. In some States it keeps more whites than Negroes from the polls. Its net effect has been to reduce the total vote in the eight poll-tax States to a ridiculously insignificant size. For example, in 1936 only 20.4 per cent. of the adult population voted in Alabama; 18.5 per cent. in Georgia; 16.2 per cent. in Mississippi; 14.1 per cent. in South Carolina; 26.2 per cent. in Texas; 25.7 per cent. in Virginia; 33.5 per cent. in Tennessee.

BUT an even more trenchant point is made. The election figures appear to convict these Southern States of clear violation of the provision of the Constitution which bases a State's representation in Congress not upon total population but upon the number of citizens who vote. If this provision were applied to the eight poll-tax States, election statisticians assert that they would lose fifty-seven of their seventy-eight House seats on the basis of the 1936 election figures. Using the 1938 figures, sixty-five of the seventy-eight would be eliminated. In 1938, thirty-two Southern poll-tax Congressmen received fewer than 11,000 votes each, and the combined vote for all thirty-two was 221,270, which is 60,000 fewer than the approximate basis fixed for one Congressman in the last reapportionment. One Representative in Chicago, in 1938, received 28,000 more votes than all these thirty-two Southern Congressmen.

IT is, of course, an absurd situation, very hard to defend—legally or any other way. If one party

"TITAN TOWER" by JAMES G. CHESNUTT

FOREWORD

When Linda Walsh, arriving in the big city from her home town, first saw the city, it was the skyline which won her. This skyline, with its towering buildings—at once friendly and awesome—was her first love, until she met Mike Morton.

In the few brief years that Linda has known it, that skyline has changed, gaining dignity and serenity and stature with the advancing years—like a lovely woman growing older gracefully. The newest feature on the city's face, and a factor in its greater beauty, is Titan Tower.

Titan Tower is not an actual building. From the standpoint of beauty and architectural distinction, newness and diversified interests of its tenants, it could be any large apartment house.

While Linda is the heroine, this is rather the story of Titan Tower itself—for the building, a compact city within the city, is the hero, the villain and the force behind each act. It is more than a locale; it is the leading character.

Winds which howl a modern harp's song in its deep throat, the 25-story elevator shafts, set the off-stage obligato for the story's start.

CHAPTER ONE

When Linda first saw Bill Blaine she was up in the air—in more than a figurative sense. It wasn't strange, then, that Linda—so far as young Dr. Blaine was concerned—should remain that way for some time.

Fate introduced Linda and Dr. Blaine, a most unconventional scene, for Linda, in white nurse's uniform, was perched on a ladder upon a roof twenty-five stories above the ground. And there, a few feet above her, in a precarious position on a cross-beam over a yawning elevator pit, crouched Dr. Blaine, the hem of his white surgical smock about level with her eyes.

Amid the heavy cables and gears of the elevator machinery was an emergency job for a doctor and a nurse. Bill Blaine was a doctor; Linda was a nurse.

That's how Linda happened to be there, standing tip-toe on a ladder, looking at . . . love. At least, Linda, it looked like love. And love to Linda was no chance stranger. They had met somewhere before.

Whether Linda was in a condition to recognize it was another matter entirely. Mistaken identity is common in this regard, even to girls with two feet planted solidly on earth. And Linda's feet decidedly were not on terra firma at the moment.

A ladder perch on a roof-top in the elevator house of a twenty-five story skyscraper was no place for that.

Linda had been there five years or five hours—or was it only five minutes indicated by her watch?—before she really saw Bill Blaine. In all that time, up to this moment, she had been too busy reaching up and trying not to look down—down into that awful, gaping pit below them—too busy really to see the man toward whom she was reaching with methodical, almost mechanical motions.

The man was tall and bronzed and his wavy hair, which looked blonder than it was because of the contrast to a complexion that could have been an advertisement for sun effects, kept blowing in the draft of the elevator shaft. His eyes were nice and on the blue side.

Linda knew the hands would be slim and strong and well kept, although she couldn't see them. Right now they were covered by rubber gloves and the gloves were dyed a deep red. . . . It wasn't a pretty sight.

Neither was the face of the man upon whom he was working. A third man, another doctor, hovered on the narrow cross beam.

Linda was spared from actually seeing what they were doing. She saw Bill Blaine instead—saw him perhaps because she couldn't let herself see the other—saw this blond young man with the tufted hair and the hands that were full.

The man on whom he worked would never be bothered by full hands again. . . . They had been wide, powerful hands, the hands of a mechanic, but the only two he had. And now he had one.

A building mechanic, a workman on a routine tour of inspection of the elevator machinery which speeds

Automatically, she handed it up to the waiting doctor; automatically she received it again, now red and warm and wet.

She knew why they chose her for the job, all right. Because Dr. Thorpe's office was the nearest to the stairs on the twenty-fifth floor and it was there that the state inspector had raced with news of the emergency. It was from there that he had telephoned to the building office for a doctor, in the absence of Linda's employer.

The two young doctors had raced past her on the roof, the tall one the cross-section of a city, the skyscraper's occupants and visitors, on vertical flights to and from offices in the building. No different today from any other routine check-up of the well-tended machinery at the top of the shaft.

That's how Linda happened to be there . . . looking at . . . love.

No different—until . . . A terrible mistake, a human mistake . . . his arm was caught and rightfully mangled between the elevator cable and the massive spool upon which it wound.

But for the state inspector, a few feet behind the mechanic, there would have been no need for the perilous operation. The man's life had been saved when the inspector succeeded in stopping the machinery, dashed down to the twenty-fifth floor for aid.

Linda had been one of the first at the scene. She had watched, aided, while the young doctors—the tall bronzed one—with another to assist him, steady him and whisper encouragement, had amputated the crushed arm of the workman, extricating him from the clutch of the steel.

The alarm, the race for the roof—these and other less related thoughts sped through Linda's mind as she stood on the ladder. For the first few minutes she scarcely heard the voice above her, the voice of the man with impatient eyes and tanned face, as he ordered abruptly: "Kelly," and she automatically reached up with the Kelly hemostat to stem the flow of blood from the severed artery.

This was hardly like the first amputation she scrubbed for while a "probe" at the university hospital, she thought. No firm white tile under foot, no neatly stacked surgical tray at her arm; just grab and hit or miss atop a ladder. "Sponge!"

Do You Know Your Lemon Garnish?

By BETTY BARCLAY

Do you make the most of lemon to bring out flavor in other foods? A plate of lemon quarters may very well take its place on the table along with the salt and pepper shaker, for in any meal there is always some food the flavor of which can be enhanced by lemon. It is well, therefore, to see that the family shopping list always provides an ample supply of this fruit.

Lemon quarters or sixths are suggested because they are most practical for juice. With a sharp knife, cut a lemon lengthwise in four or six pieces. These lemon pieces may be squeezed without getting juice on the fingers. They are decorative additions to the foods they accompany, as are lemon slices, plain or cut in fancy shapes. To heighten decorative effect, the lemon may itself be garnished with chopped mint, pimiento strips and parsley.

The lemon garnishes pictured are easily copied with the use of a sharp knife or scissors. They are used to decorate and provide flavor for an appetizing plate of asparagus, summer squash, beets, corn and asparagus.

Here are some other suggestions for food combinations that may very well include lemon garnishes.

Lemon with Tea: The custom of serving lemon with tea has grown and many guests now prefer lemon with this beverage, so the thoughtful hostess will always include a plate of lemon slices and quarters. Cloves may be inserted in the lemon for a decorative touch. Iced tea, in particular, calls for generous additions of lemon.

Lemon with Other Fruits: The juice of half a lemon adds a tang to the morning glass of orange juice. Quarters of lemon cut lengthwise give keener flavor as accompaniments for such fruit cocktails as tomato, pineapple and prune juice. Lemon does something, too, for stewed prunes, apricots, peaches, pears and apple, both dried and fresh, and there's nothing like lemon juice to bring out the full flavor of melon or provide just the right dressing for avocado.

Lemon with Fish: Lemon's affinity for fish and shellfish is well known. Oysters or clams on the half shell; seafood cocktails of all kinds; baked, broiled or fried fish gain by lemon juice, which may be provided in decorative lemon wedges or quarters. Canned salmon, sardines or tuna should be garnished with greens and a generous supply of lemon quarters. Again—and this is a trick worth knowing—sprinkle a bit of lemon juice on canned salmon or tuna before creaming or scalloping.

Lemon with Vegetables: Whether you eat spinach for duty or pleasure, lemon juice makes the eating more enjoyable. Other greens and many vegetables are improved by lemon juice. Here's a chance to do a bit of experimenting for yourself. See what lemon juice does for each. You'll make many pleasant discoveries.

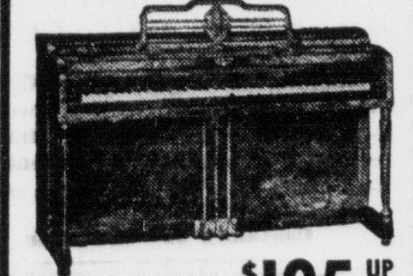

Lemon Garnish for Soups: Novel but good is the idea of a lemon garnish for soups. Float a slice of lemon on each bowl, the next time you serve bouillon or consommé. Decorative and good, too, on bean or lentil soup and such cream soups as tomato, asparagus, spinach or green pea. Lemon is especially good with feed or jellied consommé!

Lemon with the Breakfast Waffle: From England comes this surprisingly good but novel lemon use. Sprinkle waffles or pancakes with sugar and follow with a generous squeeze of lemon juice. You'll never believe how good this is until you try it.

takes a stand against it in convention, the other will be compelled to do likewise, because it, too, has come to rely for its victories upon the Negro votes in the important electoral States. If the Republicans take a strong position and the Democrats do not, the former have an effective campaign issue and can quote Mr. Roosevelt on their side. Clearly, the Democrats can't afford to let that happen—and won't. The eight Southern States are in a jam. They have been "sold down the river" by the very regime they put into power in 1932 and 1936—and they can't do a thing about it. Under the circumstances, it seems almost incredibly supple that some of them should want to continue this regime for four more years.

Ground Lamb Served In Novel Style

Are you one of those persons who like to use ground meat because it's so handy, but wish that you could get some that tasted a little different than the usual?

Then you will be interested in the suggestion of Inez S. Willson, home economist, that you add ground lamb to your repertoire of ground meats. Lamb in any form has a flavor of its own; a flavor you like because its different. Lamb which has been ground is most welcome. We often think of all ground meat being alike, because it all has the same texture. Having such a distinctive flavor of its own, lamb has a running start on its contemporaries for being well received.

The neck, shoulders and breast of lamb are suitable for grinding. Here's an idea for using the meat in a manner slightly out of the ordinary.

Lamb and Bacon Whirls

1/2 pound sliced bacon
1 1/2 pounds ground lamb shoulder
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon marjoram
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 cup cornflakes
3 tablespoons water

Leave the bacon on the waxed paper as it comes from the market or arrange slices to slightly overlap in a sheet 8 to 10 inches long. Mix lamb with all other ingredients. Spread and pat evenly over the bacon. Roll like pinwheel cookies so that the ends of the slices of bacon are rolled in with the lamb. Wrap tightly in waxed paper and chill thoroughly. Before slicing, place wooden picks through the roll at inch intervals to hold the bacon in place. Slice one inch thick. Broil or panbroil.

To broil these lamb whirls, place on broiler rack so that surface of meat is three inches from source of heat. Brown on one side. Turn and brown on second side, allowing about 6 to 8 minutes per side. Only one turning is necessary.

To panbroil, place in a hot frying-pan. Brown first on one side, then on the other. Reduce the heat and cook slowly until done, turning the meat as often as necessary to insure even cooking. Pour off the fat as it accumulates in the pan.

Roast Lamb For Special Feast

Along with our finest linen, our best silver and our most fragile china, we think of a leg of lamb as a fitting climax for the special dinner.

The flavor of lamb is distinctive, and is enhanced by proper cooking. A lamb roast will be "all right" when cooked as a pot-roast—that is, in a closed pan. But just give it a chance, by cooking it uncovered in an open pan, and you will get the true flavor of the lamb which will please every guest with the incomparable qualities of flavor, the juiciness, and the tenderness of properly roasted lamb.

Correct Roasting Method

Of course, cooking the roast in an uncovered pan isn't the only trick of the lamb-roasting trade. A leg of lamb should be roasted at a low temperature, an oven of 300 degrees F., says Inez S. Willson, home economist. As an absolute guarantee of proper length of cooking time, a meat thermometer is the answer. The meat thermometer is inserted into the leg of lamb so that the bulb reaches the center of the thickest part. Care must be taken that it does not rest on bone, if the thermometer is to register the true internal temperature of the meat. When the meat thermometer registers 175 degrees F., the lamb roast will be medium done; at 180 degrees F., lamb will be well done.

The roast should be put on a rack in a roasting pan with the skin side down and the fat side up. Do not cover. Do not add water. No, it won't burn; instead you will have an abundance of rich drippings, a roast truly golden brown, tender, juicy, and flavorful.

To Serve With Lamb

Lamb combines nicely with many accompanying flavors. Of course, mint is the classic. Currant, lemon and cranberry are also appropriate tart accompaniments. Here's a good trick for flavor supreme. Rub a leg of lamb lightly—oh, ever so lightly—with a cut clove of garlic. Yes, it does something to it.

HULMEVILLE

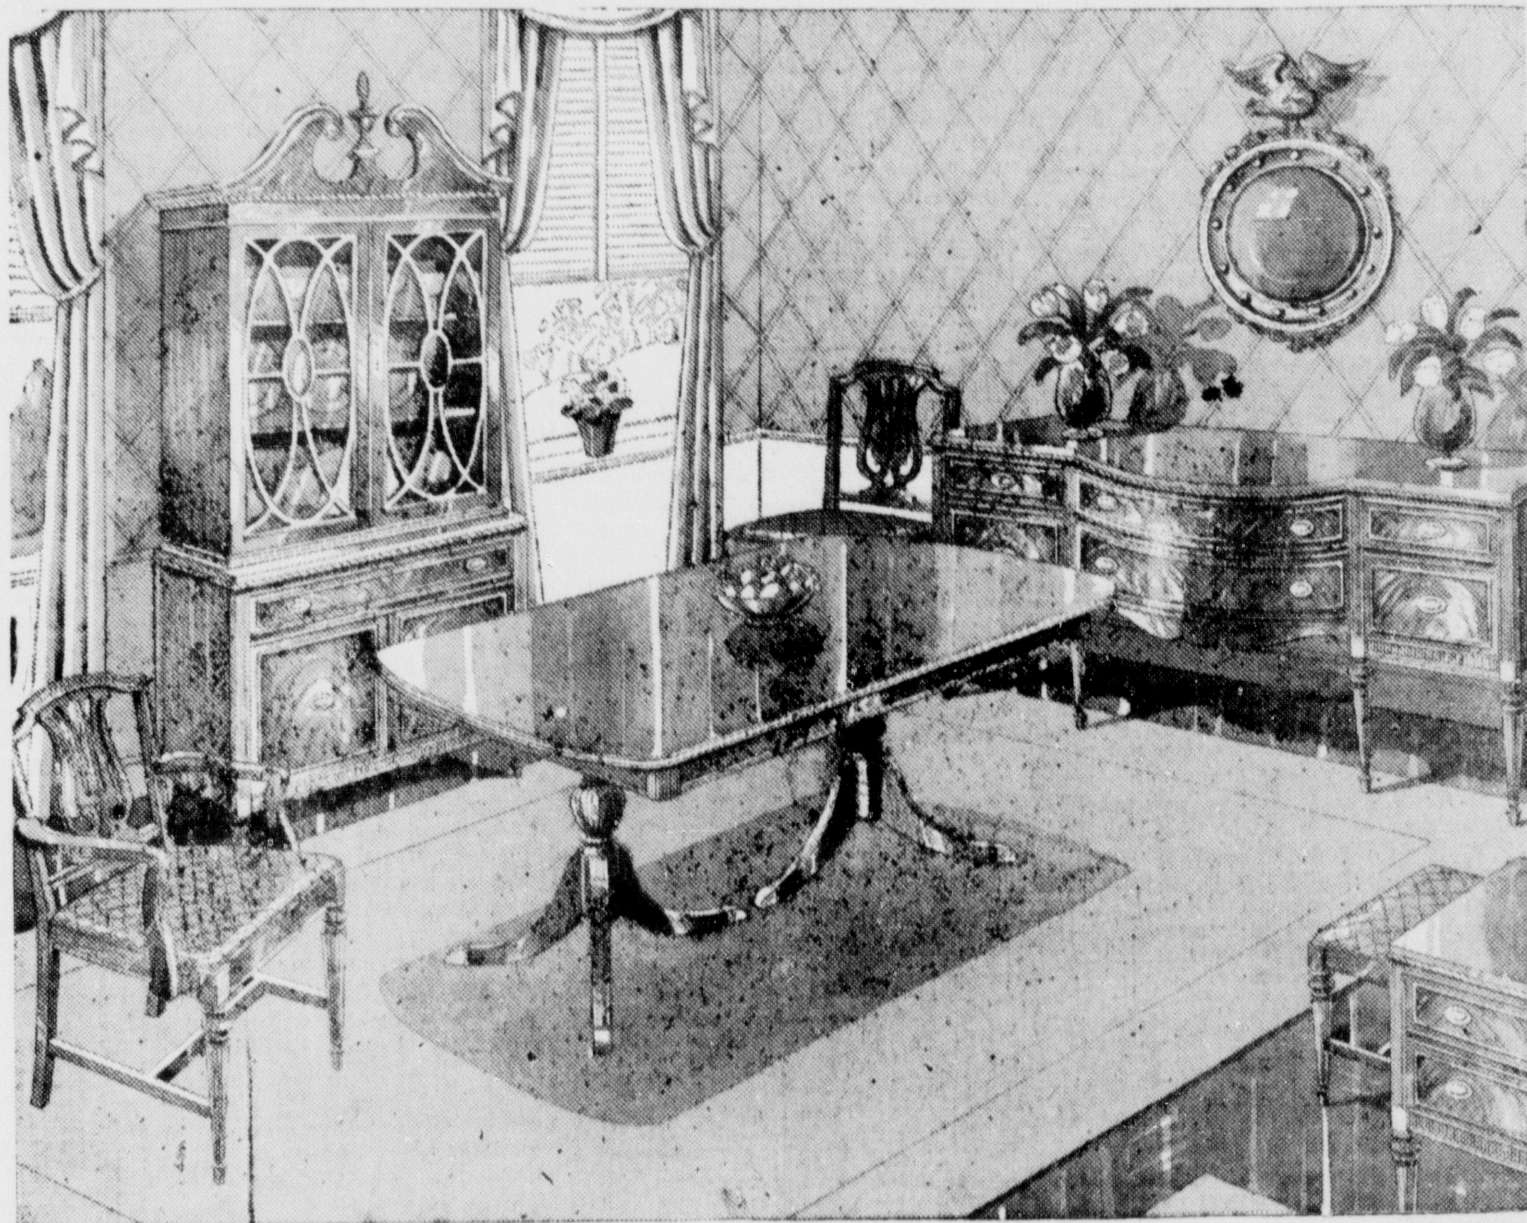

A hamburger roast was participated in last evening by members of the Peppy Pals, the affair being held at the home of Miss Marie Hanson.

DARING DOINGS WITH DRESSINGS

Little things like the dressings you use on your salads have a big influence on your mealtime success. Just a touch of added flavor here and a new type of vinegar there dealt out with a clever and knowing hand may keep your family and guests agog about the interesting salads you make.

In general, three types of salad dressings are used most frequently—thin, tangy French dressing; fluffy mayonnaise and creamy cooked salad dressing. Each lends itself to tricks of the salad-making trade that will help you to subtly bring out the best in your crisp fruit and vegetable combinations.

VINEGAR VARIATIONS

For example, in making your own French dressing you will want to try several different types of vinegars to see which does the most for certain salads. In fruit and vegetable salad mixtures, you will like pure cider vinegar. Then when you're dressing a salad of greens, equal parts of cider and tarragon vinegar with olive oil make a French dressing to enhance the delicate flavors of the crisp leaves. Malt vinegar gives a delightful lift to heartier salads you would serve as a main dish—such as chicken, tuna, egg and kidney bean salad. And for a fine general purpose French dressing, use distilled white vinegar.

Standard French Dressing

Combine in flask in order given—

1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1 cup pure cider, malt, tarragon or distilled white vinegar
1/2 cup pure olive oil.

Shake together thoroughly. This makes about 1/2 cup French dressing. When using on greens, add enough to make the leaves glisten, then toss together.

FRENCH VERSATILITIES

The versatility of French dressing are many. Add one-fourth cup of ruddy, full-flavored ketchup to make a dressing that's just right with an asparagus salad. For added color, lay a strip of pimiento over each four or five stalks of canned or fresh cooked asparagus that has been marinated in the ketchup dressing. You will like this delicious dressing, too, with lettuce hearts.

Make French dressing into Parisian dressing by adding two tablespoons chopped green pepper, two tablespoons chopped red pepper, two tablespoons chopped celery, one-half tablespoon chopped onion and one-half tablespoon chopped parsley to the foundation French dressing recipe. Mix well and serve on julienne salad made by combining one green pepper, cut in strips; two cups shredded cabbage; one cup raw or cooked carrots, cut in strips; and one-fourth teaspoon salt.

NEW MAYONNAISE TRICKS

A jar of mayonnaise, too, offers a host of different combinations to make this part of your menu more inviting. You will like slightly pungent horse-radish dressing with delicately flavored canned or cooked beets and also with meat salads. To make it, just mix one tablespoon evaporated horse-radish with two tablespoons cold water. Let stand ten minutes, then add this to one cup of mayonnaise.

By mixing a cup mayonnaise with one-fourth cup chili sauce, you have a snappy Russian dressing all ready to serve on head lettuce quarters or with a molded ham salad.

PREPARED SALAD DRESSING VARIATIONS

Open a jar of prepared salad dressing and you have even more delicious salad possibilities. Make a nippy mustard dressing for cole slaw by mixing one-half cup prepared salad dressing with two teaspoons prepared yellow mustard. This combination is delicious, too, served with a jelled meat salad. Another fine dressing with which to vary the popular cole slaw is made by mixing one-half cup of the prepared salad dressing with two tablespoons sandwich spread. This makes enough for four or five cups of shredded cabbage.

For a fruit dessert type of salad, jelly coconut cream dressing provides a fancy touch and a subtle blend of flavors that will have your guests asking questions. To make it, whip one cup heavy cream until fluffy. Break two tablespoons currant jelly into bits with a fork and fold it into the whipped cream. Also fold in six tablespoons shredded coconut and three tablespoons prepared salad dressing.

Another unusually good fruit salad dressing is made by beating one cup of peanut butter with three-fourths cup of water until it is the consistency of mayonnaise. Add this gradually to one pint of prepared salad dressing and beat hard with a rotary egg beater. Then add one-half teaspoon salt and chill.

Study Character Education And The Exceptional Child

New York City, and editor of children's curriculum material, American Unitarian Association, Boston, who in her discussion, "What Types of Religious Experience are Possible and Whole-some for Exceptional Children?" said:

It has been the primary function of religion through the ages to meet three emotional needs in human life, the need for security, the need for achievement, and the need for satisfying social participation in the group.

Mental hygiene and religion, whatever may have been the differences in the means they have employed, have shared a common aim, i. e., the emotional enrichment of the personality within a larger harmony and unity.

Mrs. Fahs makes the point that religion should be made for the child—not the child for religion; that beliefs may not have the dynamic power to transform character, but character has a tremendous dynamic power to lay hold upon those beliefs that will confirm its established patterns.

Dr. Robert A. Brotemarkle, Associate Professor of Psychology, College Personnel Officer, University of Pennsylvania, acted as Chairman for the morning program.

After luncheon, to which all those attending the Conference were invited as guests of The Woods Schools, there was ample time to visit the Schools while in session and to see the practical application of the Woods Schools' principles of education as well as to stroll around the spacious grounds and visit the Camp.

George H. Ivins, Headmaster, Oak Lane Country Day School of Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa., presided over the afternoon meeting at which W. G. Preston, Jr., Assistant to the Vice-President in charge of Programs, National Broadcasting Company, New York City, spoke on "Radio for the Exceptional Child," and Dr. Paul A. Witty, Director, Psycho-educational Department, School of Education, Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, discussed "Studying Reading Problems—A Diagnosis Program."

Is the home, as a social institution, going through a transition which involves problems of child adjustment? Pursuing this question, Dr. Carl W. Aretz, Superintendent of Schools, District Six, Philadelphia, Pa., in his talk, "Coordinating Community Efforts in Character Building," states that, "The active engagement of women in commerce, industry, politics, and the arts; ignorance on the part of many parents in raising children; the delegation of the training of children to those specializing in child care; the increased divorce rate; crowded conditions in large cities; this mechanistic and materialistic age; and many other factors combine to make the home different from the home of our childhood."

Whatever the nature of the home life of tomorrow may be, it is clear that the transition is fraught with serious difficulties in the form of emotional disturbances for the children of today and a gigantic problem in mental hygiene is presented.

Dr. Aretz believes that too much of our education is still formal and confined to the four walls of the classroom, and that many learning opportunities are present in any community which should be completely utilized by the schools in their instructional programs. The closest co-operation on the part of industry and business and the professions must also be stimulated in the development of the vocational education programs that will recognize both the abilities of pupils and the needs of the demands of the vocations in the community.

Dr. Aretz concludes that happiness is inherent in the satisfactory adjustment of the individual to his group. A comprehensive program to develop the best type of citizenship necessitates not only the services of our schools but the utilization of all character building instruments. This implies a pleasant home life, the right kind of recreation, the necessity of economic and vocational training which enjoys the opportunity to serve in a joyful way.

The problem presented by the exceptional child has been taken under discussion twice yearly at Conferences and Institutes at The Woods Schools. The Child Research Clinic of the Schools was inaugurated six years ago to further a wider knowledge in scientific, educational and lay circles of activities in the field of the exceptional child and to disseminate such knowledge for the benefit of all concerned. The Woods Schools, which was founded over a quarter of a century ago, has been working continuously for the development and adjustment of the exceptional child.

The Advisory Council of The Woods Schools includes: Dr. Edward L. Bauer, Philadelphia, Pa.; Dr. G. Kirby

Dr. Franklin Dunham, of the National Broadcasting Company, was another of the day's speakers, he substituting for W. G. Preston, Jr., assistant to the vice-president in charge of programs of that company. Dr. Dunham's address was upon the subject of "Radio for the Exceptional Child."

Immediately after luncheon, served at "Greenwood," the guests were escorted to the numerous buildings of The Woods Schools, where they watched the students at work and play.

Fuehrer is turning full attention to the Western front.

On the basis of responsibility and expert calculation in Berlin it is becoming more evident that with every move on the Western front the Fuehrer is pivoting the whole offensive upon frontal engagements with the Allies, while operating up from the north with the aim of overrunning their left wing.

Responsible quarters therefore anticipate a gigantic push from Antwerp shortly, along the Ede-Brussels coast toward Amiens and Le Havre, to get behind Paris.

BRUSSELS, May 15—Entrenched behind new positions, Belgian soldiers are now in line with Allied troops, and stiffened resistance is damping the advancing waves of German attacks in the Leige and Louvain sectors. It was officially announced today.

The fall of Brussels, however, appeared more imminent than ever, but regardless of what happens, it was announced, the American Embassy will remain in the Belgian capital and the Pictet government is not yet prepared to flee.

LONDON, May 15—German troops which surged across the Meuse River at Sedan are now in possession of sections of the French Defense Zone, it was officially admitted in London today.

There is no question, however, a military spokesman said, of the Maginot Line itself having been broken or turned at any point.

LONDON, May 15—The three children of King Leopold of Belgium have been flown to France, the Daily Mirror said today.

They will be flown to Italy to join their aunt, Princess Marie-Jose, who is the wife of Prince Umberto, heir-apparent to the crown of Italy.

BERLIN, May 15—Relatives of the House of Hohenzollern received a message today indicating former Kaiser Wilhelm is safe and is living at Doorn in Holland.

LONDON, May 15—Loss of 33 British planes in highly successful air operations on the Western front was announced in an Air Ministry communiqué today, which said:

Thirty-five R. A. F. aircraft were lost in a furious fight in the Sedan-Meuse sector in which at least 15 enemy planes were downed.

Records Smashed At Marriage License Bureau

The deadline, first interpreted as the closing hour Monday was four o'clock Tuesday afternoon instead. But the law goes into effect Saturday. But the existing three-day waiting requirement fixed 4 p. m. Tuesday as the end of the old order of things.

Although the local bureau has been open but eleven days this month the total of 322 licenses is greater than any previous one month in the history of the bureau. In June, 1939, a total of 293 licenses were granted.

The last-minute rush surpassed the expectations of Deputy Clerk Joseph Keating, the right-hand man to Dan Cupid at the local bureau.

More than 75 per cent of the license applications Tuesday were from non-residents of Bucks county, most of them coming from Philadelphia and Trenton.

Deputy Clerk Keating also figures that a lot of couples may wait until the new law goes in, just to show they have nothing to fear from a medical examination. The late applications Monday:

Anthony G. Thomas, 25, Oakford, Glendoris Lamberson, 19, Trevoze, Anthony Loder, Jr., 22, 454 Logan avenue, Trenton, Marge Stinson, 21, 5537 Addison street, Phila.

Victor Berkley, 38, Fieldsboro, N. J. Miriam Riveli, 26, Riverville, N. J. John Whyte, Jr., 31, 2831 East Elkhardt street, Cecelia Sieracka, 25, 2974 Tilton street, Phila.

William Boesenhofer, 23, Eleanor Trumbore, 24, Perkasie.

Walter Nolan Peterson, 27, 1829 Barbeck street, Catherine Rita Gould, 21, 1414 Princeton avenue, Phila.

Vincent J. Ennoli, 21, Helen A. Philpott, 21, Bristol.

George W. Conover, 21, L. Katherine Dalsis, 21, Morrisville.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)

Eternal Spirit, we cannot picture Thee in our imagination. But all about us are signs of Thy presence. In the needs which only the Infinite can supply, in the forgiveness that is complete, in the comradeship that is satisfying and transforming. Thou art speaking to our inmost souls. Amen.

makes the body alert, alive—glad to stand erect and move smoothly.

Bowling does this because it stretches and pulls the kinks out of tired, relaxed muscles. Continued stretching and pulling of the muscles firms them—peps them up—makes them elastic, pliable, healthful.

You see, bad posture usually sneaks up on us when we're tired. And, this being a hectic, high-pressure world, we're apt to be tired and let down pretty often unless we recognize the symptoms and do something about it.

Regular bowling works all the muscles at one time, gets them in the notion of working together smoothly, gets them in the habit of obeying commands.

Sighing and weeping—even a bit of polite cussing—over curved shoulders, caved-in chests, relaxed midriffs and pushed-forward heads won't help.

No! It will take a bit of fire and iron—both in will and muscle power—to mold yourself back into the kind of shape which will do justice to the new frocks. But, aren't they worth it?

After all is said and done—it's the muscles that hold the body up—or let it sag. It's the muscles that must obey the commands sent by the brain. And, they can't obey—no matter how much you will it—unless they are physically able.

Girls who bowl regularly will tell you that one of the nicest things bowling has done for them is to improve their posture. It

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Forgotten Girls," the latest offering from the enterprising Republic lot, deals dramatically with one of the most trying of our national problems—the underprivileged youth.

Judy Wingate—portrayed appealingly by Louise Platt—lives in a very unhappy environment with a frowsy stepmother, played by Wynne Gibson, who frequently entertains members of the underworld in their home. Frances, the stepmother, is infatuated with one of these underworld characters, and does not know that he is constantly pressing his unwelcome advances upon Judy.

The play is now at the Bristol Theatre.

RITZ THEATRE

An airplane designed by regular aviation engineers and based on advanced theories that may be expected to be introduced into modern aviation, was constructed for scenes in "Nick Carter, Master Detective," that presage the future in the air.

The plane, called the Rocket Ship in the exciting mystery drama, opening today on the Ritz screen, is presented as a phenomenon of the air, capable of rising 11,000 feet in two and a half minutes and attaining the speed of 450 miles an hour.

SUNDAY DINNER

Suggestions

WITH the call of the outdoors already being heard all over America, your family will be pleased on Sunday if you plan a simpler dinner to sustain them before they set out for their Sunday golf game, or automobile ride. With the variety of fresh foods available on today's markets, planning an attractive and satisfying dinner for the family Sunday gathering is no trick at all.

When you market Saturday for your Sunday dinner, you might be interested to know that good vegetable buys are beans, beets, asparagus, cabbage, carrots, cucumbers, lettuce and spinach, and grapefruit, oranges, pineapple and apples are fruit bargains to work into Sunday's menus.

Pork, lower last week than it has been, has dropped still further in price. Beef, lamb and veal prices remain about the same. Duckling is the price leader in the poultry field, followed by fowl and turkey as good values. If fish is your Sunday choice, you might be interested in fresh salmon, which is just coming in, rock lobster tails, or striped bass, fresh yellow tails and shad, all of which are excellent buys and can be prepared in a variety of ways for Sunday or any day in the week.

Here are three menus, tested by Cora Anthony of the A&P kitchen, for Sunday dinners:

Low Cost Dinner

Broiled Pork Chops with Oranges
Fresh String Beans
Mashed Potatoes
Cucumber Salad
Bread and Butter
Coffee Custard
Coffee Tea Milk

Moderate Cost Dinner
